

Bloomberg – Canoe Intelligence

MN - 40039

Phase 1 Determination

Acquisition may be put into effect

11 September 2026

1. Determination and statement of reasons

Notified acquisition	Bloomberg, Inc. (Bloomberg) proposes to acquire Canoe Software Inc. (Canoe), whereby a newly formed subsidiary of Bloomberg (Clipper Acquisition Inc.) will merge with and into Canoe, following which Canoe will be a direct subsidiary of Bloomberg (the Acquisition).
Determination	The Australian Competition and Consumer Commission has determined under section 51ABZE(1) of the Competition and Consumer Act 2010 (Cth) that the Acquisition may be put into effect.
Parties to the Acquisition	The acquirer, Bloomberg, provides business and financial news and information along with financial technology solutions including through the Bloomberg Terminal, Bloomberg Enterprise Data License, Enterprise Products, Bloomberg Electronic Trading Solutions and Bloomberg Media. These services are provided to investors and other financial market participants globally, including in Australia. Bloomberg is a privately owned company and is headquartered in New York, US. The target, Canoe, provides a data management and intelligence platform designed to streamline the collection and organisation of private markets investment information globally and in Australia. Canoe's platform facilitates the sharing of private funds data to customers.
Overlap and supply chain relationship between the Parties	The parties overlap in the supply of private markets managed data services. The structured private markets funds data shared through Canoe's platform is also an input into Bloomberg's private markets managed data services. In addition, Canoe's private markets managed data product complements Bloomberg's public markets data products and services.
Reasons for determination	When making a determination in Phase 1, the Australian Competition and Consumer Commission (ACCC) undertakes a competition assessment and considers whether it is appropriate for an acquisition to be approved or subject to further assessment in Phase 2 in accordance with section 51ABZJ of the Competition and Consumer Act 2010 (Cth) (the Act). In doing so, the ACCC must have regard to the object of the Act and all relevant matters, including the interests of consumers. For more information about the ACCC's approach to considering notified acquisitions, see the ACCC's merger assessment guidelines and interim merger process guidelines. In conducting its competition assessment, the ACCC has considered the information and documents that were submitted with the notification form. The ACCC has determined that the Acquisition may be put into effect as it considers that the Acquisition would be unlikely to have the effect of substantially lessening competition in any market. In reaching its decision, and based on the material before it, the ACCC makes the following findings. ▪ Canoe has a very limited presence in Australia and there is limited horizontal overlap between Bloomberg and Canoe. Canoe's product is focussed on the collection and organisation of private markets data, whereas Bloomberg only has limited private markets data capabilities. ▪ The merged entity is unlikely to have the ability to foreclose rival providers of private market managed data services due to the presence of alternative suppliers of private markets data sets, benchmarks and research reports in Australia.

Applications for review	A notifying party, or other person who has been allowed to do so by the Australian Competition Tribunal, may apply for review if they are dissatisfied with the determination. Pursuant to section 100C of the Act, applications for review of the determination are to be made to the Australian Competition Tribunal before the end of 14 calendar days after this statement of reasons was included on the ACCC's Acquisitions Register. To confirm whether there has been any application for review, please contact the Australian Competition Tribunal.
